Digital Designer

I'm a self taught digital product designer and frontend developer who designs and code beautifully simple things. As a designer I love to create simple content structures, clean design patterns and thoughtful interactions. As a frontend developer I code things from scratch and breakdown weird and wonderful ideas and bring them to life. In my two year experience I've done remote work for personal clients and collaborated with talented developers to create digital products for consumer use. I create custom design sites for individuals and small companies. Working as a freelancer, I'm agile and able to move quickly and adapt to working conditions. Being both a designer and developer ensures no detail is lost in transition of building products.
